		There is no commercial justification for this reprint. Try to buy any high denomination stamp at any post office in the UK and you will see what I mean. They do not stock them or most other stamps for that matter. Counter printed labels are PO preferred. Thus these reprints are aimed squarely at the philatelic market designed to extract collector dollars (pounds) without providing any service. It would seem that all Machin counter denominations in use will be reprinted by Walsall after DLR lost the printing contract. We have already seen some of these and the 50p has also been reprinted scheduled for philatelic release in January 2020.
		I assume you have all heard / read that the Iceland Philatelic Bureau closes its doors on 31.12.19, having been unprofitable for several years. If the new CEO can convince his parliament, he wants to abolish stamps completely. Bodings of things to come elsewhere?
